

Painted, spoken

edited by Richard Price

number 30

Painted, spoken is edited, typeset, and published by Richard Price. Please send an A5 stamped self-addressed envelope for a free copy (two first class stamps please) to 63 Artizan Court, Noel Park Road, London, N22 6ED

Painted, spoken's editorial policy is constituted in instalments by the contents of Painted, spoken

Earlier issues are available digitally at www.hydrohotel.net/mags.htm

Painted, spoken appears occasionally.

Other related projects are outlined at www.hydrohotel.net

Painted, spoken

edited by Richard Price

Painted, spoken number 30 2018

V e l i m i r K h l e b n i k o v

translated from the Russian by Anne Gutt

I went out as a stripling alone
Into the dead of night, Covered stiff to the ground
With tightly-grown hair.
Night stood around
And I was lonely
I wanted friends,
I wanted me.
I set fire to to the hair,
Threw away the shreds and ringlets
And set fire all around me.
I set fire to the fields, to the trees,
And all became gladness.
Klebnikov's field was alight.
And fiery I blazed in the darkness.
Now I am leaving
With flaming hair...
And in place of I Became We!

1921

R o b i n F u l t o n M a c p h e r s o n

A New Day

Dawn was a cramped shadowy room.
I stumbled in with unwieldy baskets full of the night's dream-detritus.

A voice that sounded like my own mumbled to me from the inmost corner
"Don't bring your bedlam-baskets here."

A pigeon on someone's roof moaned
"Nowhere to put them, nowhere to put them, you'd better go back to the dark."

The Shortest Day

Low cloud makes sure: there are no hills, trees that once wanted to be tall have had to stop growing half-way, the dawn tried to happen but failed.

We are discouraged from thinking that something like a universe is making and breaking its rules about time, somewhere, and shining.

A Thin Burn

The dead have a bad habit of giving me wrong answers to questions I haven't asked.

The questions I want to ask swirl like crows that can't settle for the night, not there, not yet.

A thin burn percolating from wide heathery nowhere gives an impression of speech.

"Never mind the dead," it says.
But next time I hear Murdo make the world sound like Caithness the burn has nothing to say that doesn't sound like water, water and only water.

Remote

It has stayed in the same place and followed me for sixty-five years, something remote lochs are good at.

Seen online, nowhere is remote. Here is the hour-by-hour forecast for Loch Arichlinie today:

breeze gentle, rain none. Nobody will notice the miniature waves noticing the gentleness of the breeze.

Family Gravestones

“Occasional mild spells but mostly below average temperatures, with rain.”

If only they were as familiar as old-fashioned mantelpieces, tiles keeping warmth alive, and not a touch of the loneliness of the universe.

D o r o t h y L e h a n e

two sonnets from Bettbehandlung taking milk in my mouth & spitting it | to feel alive and coherent | suffering the bath water | & the malaria water | & the wowf water | incompatible since marriage | how are you quiet and agreeable | how do you enjoy your free hours of movement | how can I know you | “you” is contingent to “me” | & I am busy thinking my way into the stability of my own psyche | having watched your psyche break | to be communal is to be in this | thinking is not a private matter | but to be thinking & gesturing is to be in a relationship with the intelligibility of the world | say “in” the world | say “in states of mind” | say “in conversation” | say “indwelling” | say “big rift in the fabric of the ego”

were you born | or crushed out | everyone pretends to want her | but doesn't want her | she is losing the sociality of thought | it is a sudden leaving of her body | & language born of pain & happy to end it | in the village | so many bodies are unclassed | heavy with folio-stasis | speech remnants addressed in the ear of the confessor | the dismembered & isolated parts of yourself | by "save yourself" | we mean save yourself the discomfort of the visit | effacing each other | never too soon & never too late to be reconciled | if you don't wear a monastic cloak then you don't have a metropolitan spirit | placing fingers in the holy water | & demanding the sick drink it

R a l p h H a w k i n s

Bats

the bats change direction until the final bat

“the young girls wished for stars instead of husbands” *

the bear has its honey the bees off Rhodes of rose the medlar and burst pomegranate offered almond ground to a paste

the Greeks sprung up from here as grass performing the morning’s calisthenics the brown bear and more bees

the stars’ foil

a door of cedar opens sew to sea and seen, seeds steer the bats return

*Bernadette Meyer

Poem 1 vi.xi.17

bright November sun through the library window black mountain born in Brooklyn

looking down rip van winkle from the Alhambra into the city of troglodytes

wood smoke from an autumnal fire long afternoon shadow to the south of Colchester

Corn from Delft is good for Elves
Bernadette Meyer

you can get a coach

transport yourself

Scarlett Johansson
an alien in Glasgow

the girl at the psalter palmistry soap

all those overburdened with the clothes they wore the abandoned, the outcast, what future they 'fished' them out of the sea

sunbathing naked

'It was like an ocean all the way round' Georgia O'Keefe

her gaze into "empty" space wind chiselled rock and strata her chin on a clenched fist a hunched, pensive figure fatigue, grief, sorrow or just meditating a posture of declining health, old age, reflection on the environment tacitly eloquent bones bone dry calcined, bleached horse steer, sheep white the body the primordial place the desert in her and she in the desert her enigmatic landscape driven by light and heat

sunbathing naked

On the tale of a Donkey

I slept with a dromedary once in the Gobi desert lumpy sand earplugs

Gary Cooper in the Foreign Legion falling in love with the nit doctor

P e t e r M c C a r e y

f r o m T h e S y l l a b a r y

19.1.3 Rusty Saffron

At a skelfy table under a salty Tree to group
With the pad of the thumb
And fingertips four Little knolls of spice.

19.1.1

Goo
It's the mushroom's lunchtime Flies are stuck in the grue-Some sweat white spots on a red um-Brella that just glue and grew.

19.2.1

Go. And don't tell me
I wouldn't let you Grow. You'll see your fingers tingle
And glow as you stretch Your palms towards me. No.

17.2.1

Row on row I reconstruct
This table out of memory,
The words that went from one row to the next,

The columns that, however strong,
Can't keep the roof from coming down

17.3.1

Raw
Set apart
For the salivant.

16.3.1

I'm going to buy a shaw Clear some larch and pine in the middle Build a house like the Quakers in New England Wi nary a nail nor drop of glue But joints that settle till they're more like grafts
And I'll stay there till it's four hundred year old And me a sprightly ninety Hearing the breakers braille the rocks at Cleadale.

15.3.1

Chaw at it Till your gooms are raw Till all that's there is one Or two Intelligences
Clacking bones in blood.

15.3.3

Chop Chop
Chomp.

15.3.10 Also Ran

While engrossed in the crossword
(The job was that thrilling)
I chalked off a horse That ran and won: Mandilinee.
How did you manage to do a stupid Thing like that? said the regional manager.
(I think he'd on a grey raincoat). Oh, I'd been practising all week.

15.2.10

Thunder choked
On the chain of the wind
And the park released
Its scents, as you did.

15.2.12

I chose the gauge
Made the net
And I let
The river
Happen on through it.

T a t y a n a M o s e e v a

translated from the Russian by Anne Gutt

* * *

such tracks in the snow as if a bird had nestled to it sheltering its chick from the bombing spreading out its wings

or was it just bored knocking on the ice with its strong beak brooding on death medea in hungry years

or was it just bored
I think birds get bored like people lying in the snow sheltering what isn't there

* * *

radio

we just ended up in cold water that's what I hear a man in an expensive suit floundering in an ice-hole in the cold water, yeah and he clings with his hands to the ice edge and the fish tail of his tie bobs up first what I need is a gentle silk wash and this water is killing me and he disappears under the water again and is no longer breathing we ended up in a cold war, the neighbours steal and look askance as a culture-sweet nerve trembles and on the roof a black cat looks across towards kosovo

* * *

throws

1.

so what else are they about apart from love and pain even the most refined anaesthetized births are sexier than the departure to the company bathhouse of first year recruits who failed university entrance for some reason the cold seasons were invented the diaghilev muses in smoking paris it's nothing, he's not mine, it's ok that he's ginger you need to rest, they say, three and a bit... checkered throws, fucking trecento it smells of printing ink, move closer

2.

you had a sore throat and glands like grapes Uncle Seryozha watched in the north wind the stop was wet everyone caught cold and he smoothed your brow with a thumb in Macdonalds we asked for tea I begged you to stop coughing otherwise your voice would disappear as you tell me you love me a little and they forgot the sugar

3.

A dog will suit us more than a cat as it suits us to sleep apart more for purely (seemingly) practical reasons let's get a giant schnauzer, a girl, Gemma I'm afraid I'll melt if you hug me we can discuss different names that night I lay and cried hugging the unbought dog

* * *

Robin Fulton Macpherson's Northern Habitat: Collected Poems 1960-2010 is published by Marick Press.

Anne Gutt is an artist and translator. She was awarded the Gabo Prize for Literary Translation Summer/Fall 2017 for her translations of poems by Ganna Shevchenko. She has also published translations of Nina Iskrenko's poetry.

Ralph Hawkins is the author of Tell Me No More and Tell Me (Grosseteste 1981), At Last Away (Gallop Dog Press, 1988), Gone to Marzipan (Oystercatcher, 2009) and It Looks Like An Island But Sails Away (Shearsman, 2015)

Dorothy Lehane is the author of three poetry publications: Umwelt (Leafe Press, 2016), Ephemeris (Nine Arches Press, 2014) and Places of Articulation (dancing girl press, 2014) and is the founding editor of Litmus Publishing.

Peter McCarey is the author of the study MacDiarmid and the Russians and many poetry collections, including Collected Contraptions (Carcanet). His collection of essays on poetry, Find an Angel and Pick a Fight is published by Molecular Press, as is Petrushka, a hybrid novel (or is it?) about a shocking kind of hybridisation. He lives in Geneva.

Tatyana Moseeva (b.1983) is a Russian poet based in Moscow. Her poems have been published in many literary journals and anthologies in Russia and internationally. She has published two collections, Snow People (2005) and Closeness (2014). Her work has been translated into English and Chinese.

Richard Price's latest collection is Moon for Sale (Carcanet).

Painted, spoken

Anne Gutt
Ralph Hawkins
Velimir Khlebnikov
Dorothy Lehane
Peter McCarey
Robin Fulton Macpherson
Tatyana Moseeva

Almost Free (just send an A5 stamped addressed envelope – the “large” 2nd class stamp will cover postage)